

"The first and governing maxim in the interpretation of a statute is to discover the meaning of those who made it." (Of the Study of Law in the United States, Circa 1790)

James Wilson was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, collaborated in writing the U.S. Constitution and was among the first Associate Justices of the United States Supreme Court.